Life and art are fusing at an exhibition in Prague. So much so that female visitors can become part of the show in quite a novel fashion - by stripping off their clothes.

(dpa) - Life and art are fusing at an exhibition in Prague. So much so that female visitors can become part of the show in quite a novel fashion - by stripping off their clothes.

VOYAGER is a show taking place at the DUP39 art gallery in Prague on 17-19 August. Over three days, around 40 different women will pose as nude models in the exhibition.

The organisers say that, having found out about the exhibition, various women approached them to ask if they could participate as naked models as well. After some consideration, the organisers decided to approve their requests.

Rest assured, if you're feeling particularly adventurous on your holidays it's not too late to sign up, according to the curators.

"If you [visit the] VOYAGER exhibition and [...] feel the need to show your naked body to the people, find a member of staff [...] and maybe we will give you this opportunity."

According to the exhibition website, another VOYAGER show was already held in Bratislava, Slovakia. Apparently it lasted just 12 hours and attracted over 700 people.
